198th Bde. sees increased action

By SGT Tom Frey

CHU LAI, (198th IO)—Action increased this week in operation Middlesex Peak as the 198th Brigade infantrymen and gunships from the 23rd Infantry Division accounted for 20 enemy killed, 23 Viet Cong suspects detained and four enemy weapons captured.

Artillery accounted for seven Viet Cong soldiers killed during action early this week. G Btry., 55th Arty., was credited with four of the enemy killed, while Charlie Battery 1st Battalion, 14th Artillery and Alpha Battery 1st Battalion, 82nd, Artillery combined for the other three kills.

Action in the 4th Battalion, 3rd Infantry's area of operation accounted for three enemy killed, three Viet Cong suspects detained and two weapons captured.

One Vietnamese "Kallier" turned himself over to an element of Bravo Company, 1st Bn., 6th Inf., earlier this week. He also gave the "Regulars" one automatic weapon and 120 rounds of ammunition.

Gunships and aero-rifle teams from Delta Troop, 1st Battalion, 1st Cavalry combined for two enemy kills and 18 Viet Cong suspects who were detained for further questioning during the week.

Flying over an area northwest of Chu Lai, gunships from Delta Troop, 1st Bn., 1st Cav., engaged and destroyed 12 enemy structures with mini-guns and rockets. An aero-rifle team was inserted into the area where they engaged and killed one Viet Cong and detained six Viet Cong suspects. The detainees were extracted to an LZ. Later, near the same area the rifle team killed a second Viet Cong.

Flying over an area west of Chu Lai, gunships from Delta, 1st Bn., 1st Cav., observed enemy suspects with packs moving along a streambed. "Blues" were inserted and detained 12 Viet Cong suspects with packs, who were extracted to a nearby LZ for further questioning.

Processing center opened

By Sp/4 William Hutchison
CHU LAI, (23rd Inf. Div. IO)—With two snips of the ribbon the new civilian processing center located at Gate One was opened. Colonel William R. Richardson, Chief of Staff for the 23rd Infantry Division and Lieutenant Colonel Thanh, District Chief for Ly Tin, presided over the ribbon cutting ceremony.

This new processing center will handle about 4000 Vietnamese civilian employees who work on the Chu Lai base. This new facility has an additional inspection lane and is located entirely within the confines of the military base. Its new location was selected because it afforded greater security than the old center located on the edge of the perimeter. The old building was considered outmoded and could not handle the increasing flow of civilian employed.

With its new location and expanded facilities, Gate One Processing will be able to carry out its duties with much needed efficiency and speed. At the center the civilians have their ID cards checked and are carefully searched for any contraband items they may be trying to get on or off the base.

This new installation was built entirely by the men of 160th Engineer Detachment (Utilities). Under the command of First Lieutenant Edward Twaddell (New York, N.Y.) the engineers put over 20,000 man-hour into the construction.

Lacking the technical skills of electricians, welders and carpenters, the men went ahead and picked up these skills . . . O J T . . .

(on-the-job-training) s they were needed. The foundation was hauled in, put down and worked into shape by the same engineers who were usually short of the necessary tools.

On dedication day with many small jobs to be finished the engineers hurried about, obviously quite proud of their accomplishment. And rightly so. "With what little they had, my men did a hell of a good job here," remarked Twaddell.

Major Getz receives Army DSC for valor

CHU LAI, (23rd Inf. Div. IO) -- Major Charles E. Getz (Prattville, Ala.) commanding officer of the 1st Battalion, 52nd Infantry, was presented the Army's Distinguished Service Cross, the nation's second highest award for valor, by General Creighton W. Abrams, commanding general of MACV.

Major Getz distinguished himself while commanding an air assault operation near Thach An Dong, Son Tinh. Prior to troop insertion, he was reconnoitering the area in his control helicopter when an enemy force was observed near a small hamlet. While flying low level in order to mark the first landing zone for the delivery of his troops, his chopper began receiving enemy ground fire.

Ignoring the heavy volume of fire concentrated at his aircraft, Major Getz directed his pilot to the second landing zone, marking it with a smoke grenade. Moments later, his helicopter landed so that he could personally direct the ground movements of his two platoons against the opposing force.

To coordinate the advance of both platoons, Major Getz raced 200 meters across an open rice paddy although enemy fire was directed almost entirely at him. Advancing to an enemy emplacement through a barrage of fire, he eliminated the position and its three occupants. As he continued forward, he discovered an enemy tunnel. He unhesitatingly entered the tunnel and captured a North Vietnamese soldier and his weapons.

Continuously exposed to hostile fire, he effectively maneuvered his two platoons in a successful assault against the well fortified enemy emplacements. Throughout the entire engagement, Major Getz aggressive and determined efforts boosted the morale of his troops, inspired them to maintain the offensive and defeat the hostile force.

General Abrams also made several other presentations to valorous members of the 1st Bn., 52nd Inf. during the awards ceremony held at the 198th Brigade's parade field.

Five Bronze Stars for Valor were presented. The recipients were Captain James A. Pace, Jr. (Swannanoa, N. C.), Sergeant Royce M. Cash (Maysville, Ga.), Specialist Four Roy M. Dotson (Bells, Tenn.), Specialist Four

Nighthawk's menu includes VC, NVA

By Cpt. John J. Hollingsworth
FSB BRONCO, (11th Brigade IO) - The real Nighthawk flies in search of insects. Vietnam's Nighthawk flies the night skies also; but unlike the real Nighthawk, insects are not on its menu-VC and NVA soldiers are.

Nighthawk is the name given to hunter-killer teams of Huey helicopters. The teams fly a high and low ship concept to ferret out VC and NVA soldiers during the hours of darkness. High ships provide illumination and spot targets for low ships by dropping parachute flares.

Low ships have Xeon searchlights for pinpointing targets and miniguns, 50 caliber machineguns and M-60 machineguns for handling anything they find while snooping around nightly in the 11th Infantry Brigade's area of operation (AO).

Captain Norman W. Hayes, West Barnstable, Mass., a low ship pilot, explains how Nighthawk operates. "Low ships work at lower altitudes and we fly at slow speeds. Low ships are important members of the team, but people don't put enough emphasis on the importance of high ships. They help by dropping flares and relaying communications. Captain Douglas Delp, Ft. Lauderdale, Fla., a high ship pilot, more or less provides command and control," Hayes said.

Specialist Four James R. Carmean, Chesapeake, Va., a low ship crew chief, pointed out other important functions of the high ships. "They tell us we are taking fire from directly underneath the ship and the high ships will act as recovery ships in case we go down."

Carmean also operates the low ship's minigun. He had to clear and readjust the minigun three times in a short time. All repairs are done in the dark or by the light of flares from the high ship. "It's kind of embarrassing," he said about the gun's failure, "just before we picked you up, I fired 300 rounds through the minigun."

Carmean worked in a gun store before coming into the Army. He attributes his ability to repair the gun in the dark because "the first thing I learn to do is field strip a weapon and then I learn to fire it."

Working at night adds a new twist to flying and identifying targets. Carmean said it took him about two weeks just to get used to the radio. Then, he said, "I was along for the ride until I started finding targets. The main thing is be observant retain what you see."

Hayes added, "darkness doesn't present a problem for the pilots. After you work an area you really don't need a map to get around. You just need the map to plot targets."

Hayes has high praise for some "Jungle Warriors" he knows only by their initials. The men operate a radar unit on FSB

Liz. Hayes says, "Never in my Nighthawk career could I find anyone who utilizes their assets any better to find targets. One night they told us to move 25 meters to the left and you'll be right over them-that's how good they are."

Nighthawk has to be a little deceptive every one-in-a-while to catch the VC soldiers off guard. Hayes said Nighthawk has been successful "because we learned the VC soldiers' habits. Sometimes we leave an area and the VC soldiers think we have gone for the night, sometimes we come back and catch them."

The VC soldiers try to deceive Nighthawk, too. The soldiers will set out ambushes for us.

Nighthawk provides an important service for the 11th Inf. Bde., and keeps the VC soldiers honest at night.

LCC set up to ease R & R hassle

By MSG Bill Pickett
CHU LAI, (23 Inf. Div. IO) - Going home on a 14 day leave?

Your trip home-and your return to your unit can be made easier since the recent establishment of a Leave Control Center (LCC) at Tan Son Nhut Civilian Air Terminal.

Upon return to Tan Son Nhut, personnel will again process through the LCC, where orders will be date-stamped so there will be no question as to when the individual returned to Vietnam.

If transportation is not immediately available to return the man to his unit, he will be detained in the Saigon area. If leaving on ordinary leave in the United States (CONUS) must report to the LCC prior to departure and upon return. The combat tropical uniform is not acceptable for wear on either R and R or leave aircraft. The summer uniform or appropriate civilian attire is required.

Upon return to Tan Son Nhut, personnel will again process through the LCC, where orders will be date-stamped so there will be no question as to when the individual returned to Vietnam.

If transportation is not immediately available to return the man to his unit, he will be detained in the Saigon area. If the delay is more than three days, the LCC will notify the parent unit.

Leave starts upon sign out from the unit and is terminated upon signing back in.

The LCC is staffed by personnel furnished by each Region Zone Coordinator, including one officer and one liaison NCO from XXIV Corps. The 23d Infantry Division continues to maintain a liaison NCO at Tan Son Nhut to provide additional assistance to division personnel departing on leave or R and R.

Scout Dogs sniff out enemy

By SP4 Greg Wright

FSB BRONCO (11th Brigade IO) - These two "old-timers" have spent most of their lives working with American troops in Vietnam, always walking point, seeking traces of the enemy.

The oldesters, Andor and Little Duke, are quite proficient at their job and are two of the most respected members of the 59th Infantry Platoon (Scout Dogs) at Fire Base Bronco.

Having passed seven years service, both German Shepherds are advancing into middle age but, according to First Lieutenant Homer Still, Tulsa, Okla., platoon leader, the dogs are still capable of doing their job.

"There is no retirement age for these dogs," explained Still. "As long as they are physically able to work they will be kept on the job."

This seems to be satisfactory for both dogs. In fact, Little Duke takes his job so seriously that he refuses to relax while in a harness. If he is in the field with his handler, the harness must be removed before the dog will settle down enough to sleep.

Such diligence has often paid off as Specialist Four William Whitehouse, Little Duke's handler, Private First Class and Gregory Strauch, working with Andor, are quick to point out.

"Andor's greatest accomplishment was the discovery of a boobytrapped 250 pound bomb," said Strauch. "He was walking point for Delta Company, 3rd Bn., 1st Inf. at the time. A bomb that size could have killed a lot of people, but Andor was able to detect the enemy's scent and alert his handler."

Little Duke has also compiled an impressive record of boobytrap detection. He has been so effective, in fact, his handler recently was awarded the Army Commendation Medal. Specialist Whitehouse does not hesitate to give Little Duke his fair share of the credit.

Both Little Duke and Andor are scout dogs, trained to detect the scent of enemy personnel and alert their handlers. Other types of dogs include trackers, used for trailing the enemy, and mine dogs, trained to detect booby-traps and explosives.

According to Still, a problem sometimes encountered is commanders in the field requesting the use of a dog when they don't realize what type of dog is needed. Also it is sometimes not understood that the dog's efficiency can be decreased by bad working conditions. These problems often lead to doubt of the dog's worth.

However, troops who have witnessed the work of Andor and Little Duke know that they could not find better pointmen than these two who have spent most of their lives sniffing out the enemy.

Roscoe didn't have ID's

By Sp/4 Jerry Kief
LZ RED HORSE, (23d DIV ARTY IO) - Early Thursday morning Roscoe rose from his quarters to do his daily PT. A little jogging never hurt anyone. He jogged right around the area past headquarters orderly room, just enjoying the beautiful morning and wondering what he would do at the club that night. Suddenly he was jumped, apprehended and jailed; charge: improper identification.

Roscoe isn't the average GI, but is a small, black dog belonging to C Battery, 3rd Bn., 82nd Arty. Like most other units throughout Vietnam, C Battery has a variety of mascots. Mascots, usually dogs, have a way of accumulating. They're found in perimeter wire, garbage piles and stuck to freshly primed roads.

The men of C Battery found Roscoe along side QL-1 near Chu Lai, a hungry, sick puppy. He was brought to Hawk Hill, given a home and nursed back to health. That was seven months ago. Since then Roscoe has become a part of the Battery and naturally came along when it moved to Da Nang.

Mascots like Roscoe get plenty of care and attention and are much better off than the poor vagrant dogs of Vietnam that never get to be mascots. But to be a full fledged mascot, a dog needs more than love and food. Dog tags, shots and an up-to-date medical record are as important to the dogs well being as it is for the owner. If shots and tags are neglected, it's an invitation to MP's to pick up and destroy the dog for suspected rabies.

Roscoe was lucky the MP's knew him and his owners. They held Roscoe until someone from C Battery showed up with records and a new set of dog tags. After being reprimanded by the MP's the owners took Roscoe home and put a new collar on the pooch, with dog tags welded on.

Specialist four Cleo Capers holds onto Roscoe, the mascot of C Battery, 3rd Battalion, 82nd Artillery. Roscoe was nabbed by local MP's for running around without his dog tag's. Capers took Roscoe's records and a new set of tags down to the MP's to get the pooch released. (U.S. Army Photo by 1LT Fred G. Vigeant)

San Juan turned over to ARVN regiment

By Sp/5 Greg Wright
SAN JUAN HILL, (11th Inf. Bde. 10) - The name San Juan Hill goes down in history again. Although not as historically significant as its namesake, the little hill 18 kilometers west of Duc Pho has played an important role in the Vietnam conflict.

The 4th Battalion, 21st Infantry, has seemingly made a habit of closing down firebases. The first was Charlie Brown, located in the Anamite Mountains; the second was Debbie, from which the fertile "rice bowl" area was controlled; and now the isolated mountaintop known as San Juan.

The 1300 foot hill has long intimidated NVA soldiers in the mountainous area northwest of Duc Pho. From their firebase atop San Juan, American troops could keep a watchful eye on a major infiltration route. It didn't take long for the NVA soldiers to learn that American eyes are keen and vigilant.

According to Lieutenant Colonel Vernon B. Sones, Butler, Pa., commander of the 4/21st Inf., the two rifle companies based at San Juan Hill have been successful in their operations there.

"Our mission in the San Juan Hill AO (area of operations), was the interdiction of enemy communication and infiltration routes through these mountains," said Sones. "The two companies from 4/21st Inf. were put there in January and since then have been getting the job done. Now ARVN troops have accepted the responsibility for the area, and indications are they will continue to successfully carry out their mission."

Accessible only by air, San Juan Hill was often completely isolated by rain or fog. It was a small firebase, and its facilities were far from luxurious. To the infantrymen based there, however, the hill was a little bit of "home". It was a chance for showers, hot chow, and an occasional movie. It provided a degree of security which enabled men to relax and forget the tensions of the field.

With the troops of 4/21st Inf. gone, San Juan Hill is now occupied by men of the 1st Company, 2nd Battalion, 4th ARVN Regiment. Although the hill has changed hands, it is no less a threat to enemy personnel in the area. Perhaps its meager comforts will also be appreciated by the new tenants.

CHU LAI, (198th Inf. Bde. IO) - Patience, good judgement and quick reflexes paid off for infantrymen from the 23rd Infantry Division's 198th Brigade as they killed two NVA soldiers and captured two enemy weapons and other equipment on a recent mission in a mountainous area southwest of Chu Lai.

An element from Delta Company, 1st Battalion, 52nd Infantry, has moved from their day laager position to an ambush site on a high bank overlooking a river.

"The machinegunner, who was our flank security, saw the SOUTHERN CROSS

NVA soldiers when they were about 300 meters away," said Specialist Four Bruce Lemay, Thomaston, Conn., a grenadier. "We waited until they were all in the open and directly across from us 150 meters away."

The infantrymen engaged the enemy with small arms fire and saw one drop and two others evade into thick vegetation. A patrol was sent across the river under cover from the remainder of the element to check out the situation.

"They were almost to the other side when we saw one of the enemy emerge from the bushes," said Lemay. "We fired at him again and saw him fall back under cover."

The 198th Inf. Bde. came from behind in the final two games of the 23d Infantry Division Fast Pitch Softball Championship and twice defeated Company A, 523d Signal Battalion to win the division title.

The champs battled through the losers' bracket of the double elimination tournament which began May 11, and in game 52 of the tournament, Jeff Stevens hit a grand slam home run to provide the winners with all the runs they needed in the 4-2 win. The winning runs were scored in the last of the sixth inning after Company A had taken a 2-0 lead on home runs by Bill Klaus and Everett Kitchen in the third and fourth innings respectively.

Those home runs were the first two hits of the game off winning pitcher, Chaplain Don Grover, who bested the Signaleers' Art Quackenbush in the semifinal game of the tournament, with Company A holding a 1-0 lead. But the brigade men notched two runs in the sixth inning and added six in the seventh frame for an 8-1 victory, earning another chance for the title.

Third place in the tournament went to 635th Military Intelligence Company, while another 523d Sig. Bn. team-Company C-earned fourth place. Team trophies and individual awards were scheduled to be presented to the top four teams.

Third baseman Klaus got the first hit off for the Alpha Company nine when he homered to left field in the third inning. Catcher Woodson's fourth inning blast was nearly caught by right fielder Dave Reen, but the ball barely tipped off his glove as he reached over the fence.

A momentary loss of control in the fatal sixth inning got loser

Quackenbush into trouble. He walked Terry Dagit to lead off the inning, then hit shortstop Tom Frey with a pitch. Reen then singled up the middle, setting the stage for Stevens' game-winning home run.

The losers threatened in the seventh inning when Charlie Penn walked with one out, after a pinch hit single put runners on first and second. Chaplain Grover got the next two batters out to snuff out the threat.

Luc Luong Scout Do-Van-Gioi was presented the Army Commendation Medal for Valor.

Along with General Abrams, other distinguished persons present included Lieutenant General James L. Sutherland, commanding general XXIV Corps, Major General James L. Baldwin, commanding general of the 23rd Infantry Division, and Brigadier General Bertram K. Gorwitz, assistant division commander for support. Also in attendance were Colonel Khan, chief of staff for the 2nd ARVN Division and Colonel Loi, province chief of Quang Ngai province.

The 1st Bn., 52nd Inf's awards ceremony was an impressive event. But not nearly so impressive as the valorous deeds performed by the medal recipients—most notably Major Getz.

inning on a hit batsman and a triple by Dagit. The teams battled on even terms until the 198th tallied two runs in the sixth and added six more in the seventh inning, three runs scoring on a home run by Reen.

Division Special Services office personnel, encouraged by the participation in the softball tournament, have scheduled volleyball during July, and are planning a slow pitch softball tournament for later this summer.

Captain MacArthur now Division Chapel pianist

The 23rd Infantry Division's chapel has a new pianist for its Sunday morning Protestant services. Captain James B. MacArthur, Saginaw, Mich., Commander of Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 523rd Signal Battalion, is lending his talent to the chapel's piano every Sunday.

The busy captain is also mess officer and officer-in-charge of the local MARS station. Yet he has gladly taken time from his busy and demanding schedule to play for the chapel. But to MacArthur this is certainly no bothersome task, for he derives great pleasure and relaxation from his playing.

Being in Vietnam has sorely dampened his piano playing—his full schedule and the lack of readily accessible pianos are two of the biggest reasons. He often plays on one of the Special Services pianos here in Chu Lai in any spare time he can get together.

"When I am playing my problems just sort of fade away, I guess to me the piano is my narcotic," stated MacArthur.

The young captain started out on classical music during most of his eight years of piano instruction. Lately he has turned to the pop music field, especially to the music of Burt Bacharach.

"I can really find a tremendous amount of pleasure out of just sitting down at the piano with a few friends and having an old fashioned sing-along," remarked the young pianist.

Though limited to spiritual music, Captain MacArthur has brought a little something extra to the Sunday Protestant services.

In a simple military ceremony, the 27th Surgical Hospital was inactivated here June 11.

Operational at Chu Lai since April 13, 1968, the 27th Surg., according to Major General James L. Baldwin, commanding general, 23d Infantry Division, "has truly been a member of our team." In the hospital's three years here, it treated 24,000 American and Vietnamese patients in support of the 23d Division.

In addition to General Baldwin, the list of distinguished guests included Colonel Philip J. Noel Jr., commander of MEDCOM and Colonel William T. Bethea, commanding officer, 67th Medical Group. Major William W. Eversmann commanded the 27th Surgical Hospital.

According to Colonel Noel, the shutdown was not "in a sense of failure or incompleteness...it is with honor, and part of the mission so well accomplished."
